DCB BANK PLC FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS FOR THE QUARTER ENDING JUNE 2024

INDUSTRIAL OVERVIEW

INCOME STATEMENT ANALYSIS

Net Profits increased by 167.99%, from a loss of TZS 1.1 billion during Q1'24 to TZS 756 million during Q2'24.

Possible Reasons:

Impairment losses on loans and advances fell from a loss of TZS 613 million to a gain of TZS 851 million, resulting in a quarterly gain of TZS 1.71 billion. This resulted from a TZS 2.20 billion decline in Non-Performing Loan and a TZS 852 million decrease in total allowances for probable losses due to increased loan loss recoveries.

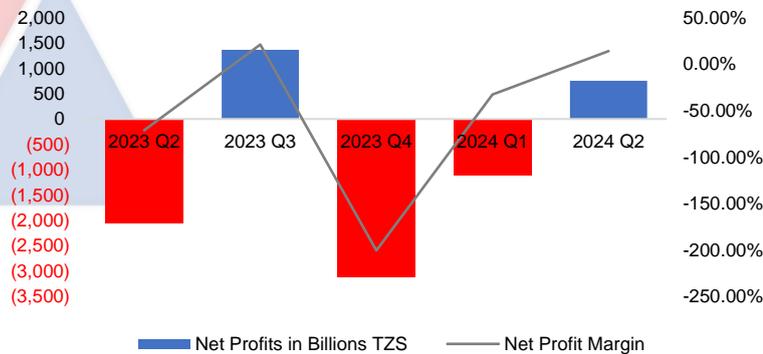

Non-interest income increased by 25.77% to TZS 1.60 billion during Q2'24 due to a 20.38% increase in the bank's fee and commission income and increased foreign exchange income.

Operating Expense growth stood at 3.74%, lower than net operating income growth of 59.84%, resulting in a fall in the bank's cost-to-income ratio from 112.45% during Q1'24 to 102.07% during Q2'24.

Underperformances in the Income Statement:

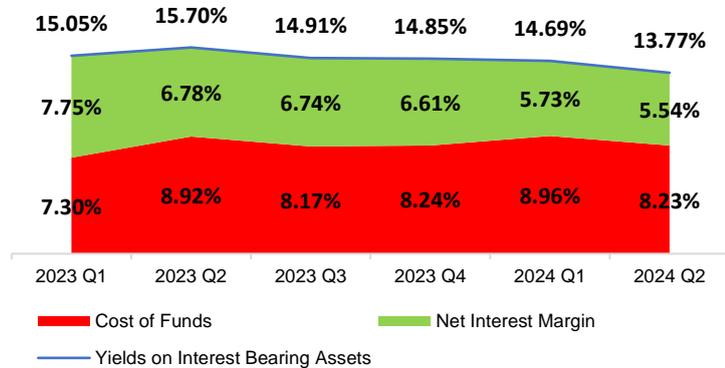

Since Q2'22, the bank's net interest income margins have been squeezed quarterly as interest expenses grow faster than interest income. Increased competition forces smaller banks to offer affordable loans while the cost of funds remains high due to the need to offer high-interest deposit accounts to attract and retain customers. This, hence, affects Net Interest Income growth.

OUTLOOK

DCB's half-year losses have shrunk by 81.36%, amounting to TZS 356 million. The loss reduction was mainly attributed to a reduction in non-cash expenses, such as the release in the bank's impairment charges, the absence of loan write-offs, and a 5.15% reduction in the bank's operating expenses. Nonetheless, shareholder reaction has been negative with the stock down by 15.38% Year-to-Date.

Looking ahead, the bank's immediate strategy seems to be to increase cost efficiency by limiting operating expense growth, especially in comparison to the bank's net operating income, evident during the year's first two quarters. However, the sustainability of this approach remains in question as the bank's small market position limits it from attracting cheaper funding to conserve its net interest margins, a factor that has been evident with the reduction in its net interest margins for the past 8 consecutive quarters since Q2'2022 this might continue to erode its net interest income.

Furthermore, guidelines from the central bank on fees and charges, which aim to prevent unfair pricing of banking products to protect the customer, may ultimately cause further pressure and result in further reductions in the bank's non-interest income, affecting its loss minimization prospects.
